FIND TWO WOMEN MURDERED NEAR NEW YORK TODAY

Both Had Throats Cut and Stab Wound in Back—Blood-stained Butcher Knife in Clump of Bushes

BLACK HAND SEEN AS CLUE IN TRAGEDY

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Apr 6.—Miss Bessie McMahan of Buffalo, N. Y., and Mrs. Irene Blandino, of Jersey City, N J., were found murdered with their throats cut, along an isolated roadside at Dongan Hills, State Island, early today. Police believe they were murdered elsewhere and their bodies thrown from the automobile.

The bodies were found on each side of the road in an isolated section. Police recalled that section as marked by bootleggers' operations during the winter. Thirty feet from the roadside police found a large blood stained butcher knife in a clump of bushes. In addition to having their throats cut a stab wound was found in the back of each girl. There were no signs of a struggle at the roadside. They had been dead about five hours when found.

The first tangible theory for a motive for the slaying was advanced by Jersey City police after they learned that Mrs. Blanding was the former wife of Frank Bongiovani of Jersey City, reputed blackhand gang leader Bongiovani was slain in Jersey City last year while out on bail in connection with the murder of two men in a saloon fight. Police suggested members of the gang which slew Bongiovani may have killed his widow in quest of further revenge. Miss McMahon, according to this theory, was slain only because she happened to be with Mrs. Blandino when assailants found her.

MARTIN-PAGE CO. TO DOUBLE PRODUCTION

Plan New Building Addition, Forty-five Extra Machines, And Number More Employes

An addition which will practically double the present production of the Martin-Page company has been started. Forty-five machines will be installed, bringing the total number up to one hundred. Horace C Martin, president of the company, said that the added building which will be one story in height and contain about 2000 square feet of floor space should be completed within a few weeks

As soon as it is completed the new machinery which has already been received at the plant will be put in operation The addition to the factory is made necessary by the increasing business of the firm.

The problem of getting enough girls to operate the extra machines seems to be the main difficulty. Mr. Martin says there are not enough to run the machines they now have. People of Middlesboro and vicinity have not, it seems, yet become accustomed to factories and the girls are rather reluctant to seek employment there. It is this condition, rather than a shortage of girls, he says, that makes it so hard to procure factory help here.

The Martin-Page building is now being repainted It is well lighted and well ventilated, plant factors which add much to the comfort of the workers.

SCORES PROMINENT MEN WHO BUY BOOTLEG LIQUOR

Tacit Sanctioners of Prohibition Law Violation Called Most Guilty By Federal Commissioner Haynes

TELLS IMPROVEMENT IN SOCIETY SINCE PROHIBITION

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Apr. 6.—The attitude of persons "in official and professional" positions who 'tacitly sanction" violations of prohibition laws by purchasing "bootleg liquor" is a 'matter for serious thought," Federal prohibition commissioner Haynes declared in an address here today before the New York annual Methodist conference. These men, he said, should be considered even more guilty than those of whom society expects less. Haynes declared there is a fixed purpose to support the prohibition enforcement. He asserted deaths from alcoholism in New York state had decreased five per cent in three years and that arrests for drunkenness fell 54 per cent in two years.

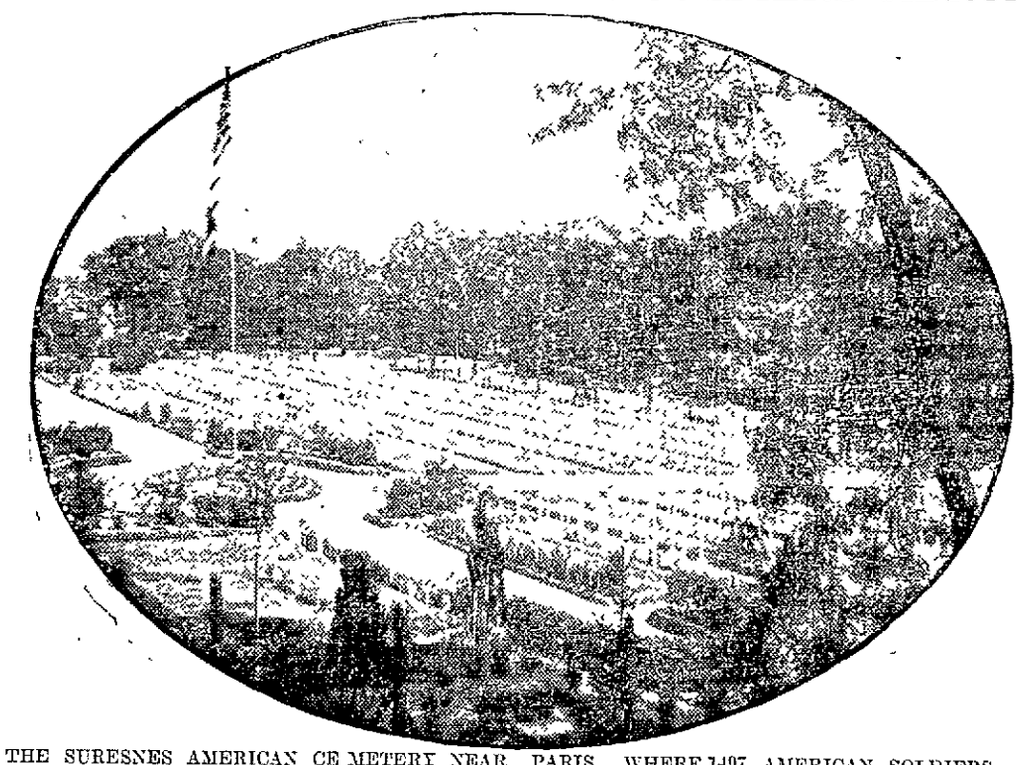
LEGION ASKS $100,000 FOR THE CARE OF GRAVES OF AMERICAN SOLDIERS ABROAD



THE SURESNES AMERICAN CEMETERY NEAR PARIS, WHERE 1497 AMERICAN SOLDIERS ARE BURIED. THIS IS ONE OF THE CEMETERIES THE LEGION WILL DECORATE ANNUALLY FROM THE ENDOWMENT FUND IT IS RAISING.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 6—To make the 32,100 American soldier graves in Europe bloom with flowers every Memorial Day as brightly as if they were at home is the objective of a fund campaign undertaken by the American Legion.

The legion, its headqarters here announces, is seeking an endowment fund of $100,000 which will provide sufficient income to dedicate the grave of every American soldier aroad every year

The fund will be obtained in the United States by personal and community subscription. Anyone can help and no amount is too small.

For the past three years decoration of the graves in France was in the hands of the Paris post of the American Legion.

According to the most recent figures the graves of Americans are divided as follows: 31.000 in France and Belgium 488 in England, 140 in Scotland 40 in Ireland, and the body of one American sailor in Spain.

Contributions already have come in. The first of the World War leaders to contribute was former President Woodrow Wilson. The first legion post was Chief Paduke Post, Paducah, Ky., closely followed by a post in Kansas City, Kan.

PRAISES WORK FOR BETTER ROADS HERE

Col. McBryde Says Moss and Bosworth Originators of Good Roads Campaign in State

"People of this section of the state need no urging to boost for better roas; Senator White L. Moss, Joe Bosworth and others are originators of the good roads campaign in Kentucky," declared Col. Robert J. McBryde, president of the Kentucky Good Roads association, who was in Middlesboro today. Roads in this section are better than they are in Western Kentucky, he stated, and there are worse roads in twenty miles of Louisville.

At the meeting of the Good Roads association which took place in Louisville recently resolutions were passed to ask the next legislature to submit the question of a $50,000,000 bond issue to the vote of the people. The $3,800,000 revenue derived from auto and gasoline tax would more than pay the interest on the bonds, he said, and with the increase in the number of automobiles, the amount would be annually increased.

The Good Roads association is working for good roads in all parts of the state and not for any certain section, declared Col. McBryde.

It is not interested in the roads for the benefit of tourists so much as for the farmers who are unable to reach the markets on account of the condition of the roads. All the counties should be linked up with good roads, he says, so that commerce could be more easily carried on.

He says that the members of the association feel confident that if the bond issue is left to the vote of the people it will pass. With the placing of the road management in non-political hands, which condition the association is striving for, Col. McBryde says that he believes a new era of road building is opening for us.

L. M. U. WINS FIRST BASEBALL GAME

Score Against Transylvania Yesterday 7 to 0—Rain Prevents Game Wednesday

L. M. U won its first game of baseball yesterday in the match at the University with Transylvania, the score being 7 to 0, and L. M. U coming out with no errors. The game was a splendid one and the showing of the University team was especially good. The game which was to have been played Wednesday had to be called off on account of the rain. A doubleheader was then planned for yesterday, but this, too, had to be dismissed because of the inclement weather. Brown pitched and Murray caught for L. M. U.

"TAKE IT FROM ME" IS BIG HIT IN KNOXVILLE

That "Take It From Me," the musical show coming to the Manring tonight is all it is advertised is indicated in the following criticism of the show from the Journal and Tribune:

"Living up to all advance promises and with not a disappointing moment "Take It From Me" delighted two large audiences at the Bijou theatre yesterday—persons who have searched all season in Knoxville for a girley, tuneful, comical musical show, have at last met their reward

The play revolved around the efforts of a young man to wreck a business to injure someone else. By making good he would have gained for himself but felt unable to face the task and pursued the easier route. But despite his most determined efforts to wreck the business, he was frustrated by his charming private secretary who wanted him to succeed for his own sake,

"Take It From Me", "The Call of the Cozy Little Home," and "Camaflouge" were most heartily received among the musical numbers, while the dancing of Marjorie Fielding and Robert Hart, rivaled anything seen in Knoxville this year.

Marjorie Sweet as Queenie, the movie star, was a gorgeous creature to gaze upon Of a somewhat odd type she wore clothes to perfection.

HUGE POWER PLANT ON CUMBERLAND TO BE BUILT BY K. U.

Will Have Power Three Times That of Pocket and Varilla Plants—to Supply Steady Service to Whole Section

$1,500,000 AVAILABLE FOR NEW CONSTRUCTION

A mammoth power plant, costing approximately $1,500,000 will be built by the Kentucky Utilities company on the Cumberland river in this county, provided present plans of the company materialize, according to L. B. Herrington, vice president of the company who was in Pineville recently.

Though the site for the proposed plant has not been definitely decided upon, option on the Martin Green farm on Four Mile road has been obtained by R. M. Watt, Pineville manager, and efforts are being made now to determine whether this is a suitable location. Construction work will begin at an early date, if a suitable location is found.

The plant will have a power equal to three times the amount now produced by the Pocket and Varilla plants combined. It will be connected with these stations, providing steady power for the mining towns in Kentucky, Southwestern Virginia and East Tennessee. It is said that a connection between this and the big Dix power project, also being planned by the Utilities company, with a power plant on Dix river, will ultimately result.

Mr. Herrington said that funds for financing the big project is available and that the real problem confronting the officials is the finding of a suitable site. Sufficient foundation for holding the heavy equipment will have to be made and a water supply will have to be such as will last through the dry season. A stream furnishing approximately 30,000 gallons of water per minute will be required to run the plant.

The present capacity of the Varilla and Pocket plants in 15,000 kilowatts and the new plant, according to the plans, will have an initial equipment equal to this, so arranged that it may be increased at any time.

S. J Sanderson, of Sargent and Lundy, consulting engineers of Chicago, and engineering advisers of the Mid-West Utilities company, of which the Kentucky Utilities is a subsidiary, were in Pineville also last week. Mr. Sanderson obtained preliminary data for the big project.

WOULD PREVENT SALE TO FORD

Lexington Man Charges Syndicate Sold Coal Land At Much Less Than Value

FRANKFORT, April 4—Legal obstacles to the immediate completion of the sale to Henry Ford's company of the 140,000 acres of coal and timber land in Eastern Kentucky by the F. S. Peabody Syndicate of Chicago have arisen through the filing of a suit in Federal Court here by Thomas C. Fuler of Lexington, who prays for a receiver for the syndicate and for a restraining order to prohibit the sale until his rights and interests are dwtermined by the courts.

Fuler alleges that the land sold to the Fordson Coal Company, controlled by the automobile magnate, is worth no less than $15,000,000 and that the syndicate is contracted with the Fordson company for sale of the property for $12,500,000, or $2,500,000 less than the real value of the property.

The plaintiff claims the syndicate is indebted to him in the sum of $105,000 which he put up to finance the purchase of the land in question and contends that he owns a one-tenth interest in the property.

A THOUGHT

To everything there is a season; and a time for every purpose under the heaven.—Eccles. 3:1.

The ill-usage of every minute is a new record against us in heaven.—Zimmerman.

KISMET
APRIL 6

Six years ago today, April 6, the United States declared war on Germany. We won't bore you with a lot of cheap oratory about what our country did in the war—such things as statistics and the force we exerted in swinging the decision. These things you already know. Or, to be more precise, each of us has his individual opinion.

On this April 6, your thoughts swing out and contemplate the world as the war left it—Ehrope in particular.

Things still are messed up badly. But they're steadily getting untangled. Europe is returning to hard work—increasing production. The people over there, dazed and psychically nervous are nevertheless learning their lesson, that war doesn't pay. Truth comes slowly. But it'll come, in time. Compared with a year ago, Europe is emphatically in better condition. Her politicians still are eating fire. Time will remedy that also—restore sane leadership.

We have been expecting too much of Europe. Any one who knows history, realizes that it takes years—generations—for people to settle down after a big war. America hasn't totally recovered yet from the Civil War.

Any old-timer, particularly in the southern states, will tell you that the suffering, confusion and bitterness that resulted from the Civil War lasted for years and years. On a smaller scale, we went through what Europe is going through today and will for years to come.

So don't become discouraged when Europe has a natural relapse periodically. Things are moving in the right direction over there—and a lot faster than public affairs lunatics tell us.

It takes longer to rebuild a house than to tear it down.

As for America today, you'd hardly know we'd entered the war, except when you go out to buy something or when the tax man calls. Several millions still feel the war keenly, but viewing the nation in a broad way we have practically 'recovered." This demonstrated in the fact that the war is virtually eliminated from our minds. How many days out of a month does our part in the war pop up to your attention? And even then, how many minutes until you brush it aside?

On April 6, 1917, our Congress took action that shaped the whole world's future for centuries to come. That day was a turning of the tide, one of the most gigantic dates in history. We are living too close to this to realize. The world came to a fork in the road. It turned to the right—and is going ahead stadily. Post-war troubles will diminish as the years roll on.

The difference between a dance and a bootleggers' convention isn't as much as it should be.

They say a Cincinnati cafe owner has been identified as a bandit. We say it sounds plausible.

A perfect lady never 'chews tobacco in public or shoots any man unless he is her husband.

American Women Write Five Of The Ten Best Sellers

AUTHORS OF BEST SELLERS—DOROTHY CANFIELD, AT LEFT, AND ZONA GALE

By James W. Dean

NEW YORK, April 5—The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules America's fiction. Five of the ten best sellers of March were written by American women Three American men are represented on the list.

The five women are Dorothy Canfield, Willa Cather, Mary Roberts Rineheart, Frances Hodgson Burnett and Kathleen Norris.

The names of Zona Gale and Gertrude Atherton will undoubtedly be found among the first ten in April through the immediate and fast growing popularity of their respective new novels, "Faint Perfume" and 'Black Oxen."

"Faint Perfume" is Miss Gale's first novel since "Miss Lula Bett." It is so finely written that one suspects that the length of time in turning it out was due to meticulous selection of phrases and precision in construction.

This new novel is a romance of the mind, the love story of a girl of acute sensitiveness and a man hampered in the quest of happiness through an unfortunate marriage.

Leda, the girl, lives with the Crumbs a family as crass as that of George Babbitt. She is an orchid placed in a vase with daisies. Richmiel, the daughter of the Crumbs, who has sought love in idleness, returns home divorced, bringing her son not through love of him but through revenge upon his father.

Barnab, the boy's father, comes in search of him and thus enters into Leda's life His divorced wife holds them apart by threatening to withhold the boy.

Thus there is no physical element in the romance of Leda and Barnaby Theirs is a spiritual companionship, their happiness lies entirely in their mental attunement.

Romance is mostly physical as Gertrude Atherton pictures it in "Black Oxen." This story deals with a woman past the middle meridian who resorts to new discoveries of physicians to gain rejuvenation. If she can recapture youth she can regain romance. The character enlists pity, but not sympathy.

Turning The Pages

Picked up "The Code of the Karsteins," by Henry Walsworth Kinney. Dead title for a book dealing with the amorous escapades of a curly-headed Swede. If he had called it "The White Shiek" it would have a bigger sale...."Life of Christ," by Giovanni Papini (translated by Dorothy Canfield) seems a futile thing to me. He admits a fine literary style of the Bible and then sets forth the story of Christ in a less worthy style. Certainly he tells us no more of Christ than the Bible tells us.... Bill Tilden, tennis champ, sets forth in "Singles and Doubles" a peculiar idea of sportsmanship. That is of a player recognizing the mistake of umpire or linesman in his favor should immediately throw the next point to his opponent As Heywood Broun points out, this is poor sportsmanship. It reflects off the judgment of recognized officials....Read three chapters in "Peter Pan and Wendy" and found therein the quality lacking in 99 of 100 stories printed today, the quality that stimulates mental exhiliration, the quality that creates living characters out of thin air....Oh, for an American Barrie!....Sherwood Anderson's "Many Mariages" is now in its third printing....Robert A. Simon's first novel, "Our Little Girl," deals with preception but without feeling with an attempt to make a musical genius of a girl without musical talent....In "The Barb" William J. McNally takes a slap at college fraternities. Fellows who belong to D. U. will be particularly interested in the author's sketch of a D. U. pledge.... "The Boll Weevil of Democracy, the gangrene of social progress and the bookworm of gentle manners" That is Lee Wilson Dodd's description of Sadie, the central figure of his "The Girl Next Door." It is the story of a "wise" girl who thinks she knows more than she really knows about man-trapping. A very familiar figure.... Edith M. Hull who wrote the "Sheik," is tracking in the Sahara again, probably searching for another parching romance...."Blackguard" is the title of the first novel by Maxwell Bodenheim, the poet. It has a poet for a central figure, so the author is working with familiar material. . ...Helen Jerome dedicates "The Secret of Woman" to H. I. Mencken "with faint hope of reforming him." It appears to me that she has little hope of reforming anyone with such passages as these, "The intellectual woman dwells in solitude. for there can be no friendship from man. Men and women as comrades! Have you ever seen it without a background of sex? Men cheat women always, and everywhere: in Love, in Marriage, in Business." It is hardly a fair picture of a woman.

LETTER FROM LESLIE HAMILTON TO JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT

You cannot tell, dear heart, how sorry I was that you were called back to your old business.

I think that even if a firm is wholly hard-headed and money-minded it might give a man a little time to himself when he goes away to be married.

Even dad said in his gruff way that the heads of your firm must think a lot of you to insist upon your coming back at just this time. I told him they did; that they probably could not get along without you. Dad laughed, of course, but I knew he was impressed.

Well, darling, we had the lovely fancy dress ball at Karl Whitney's gorgeous home. You know I was rather disappointed that you and Karl did not take to each other with more cordiality. Of course, I know that you are a Harvard man and he comes from Yale, but that ought not to make dissention between you.

You're not jealous of Karl are you, John? You need not be, I'm sure. In fact I think you should be proud that another man has wanted the girl who is giving herself so unreservedly to you.

I think, dear heart, it was rather horrid of you when I asked you again if you had ever told any girl you loved to answer by asking me the question—had I listened to Karl Whitney's tale of love?

Of course you must know that telling a tale of love and listening to one is entirely different. One is an act which is absolute voluntarily and the other can be purely negative, uninterested reception of the man's protestations.

Your friend Sydney Carton arrived here yesterday. He is quite a bit older than you, John, isn't he?

I like him very much, however. He has such a quizzical way of smiling out of a corner of his mouth, but I don't understand why he did this when I held the heads of your firm up so indignantly for taking you away just at this time.

I haven't even written these men thanking them for that magnificent chest of silver they sent me. When I do I am not so sure but I shall tell them I would much rather have had you with me the few days before our marriage than all the silver in the world.

I wonder if you have paid any attention to my little sister Alice, I mean dear, have you taken the time to study her at all?

She is going to be a very, very brilliant girl and has more individual ideas than anyone I ever knew—in fact, I think she is far cleverer than I.

Although she gave to you and me a very beautiful French clock and mantle ornaments, she came to me the other day and with her hand behind her back like a child who is holding something she was afraid to show me, said:

"Sister, I have a great favor to ask you. You know the old adage that the bride must wear something old, something new, and something borrowed and something blue if she would be happy, and I want to provide you with all these—the something old is this"—and she handed me a little old battered gold heart on a slender chain that she had worn about her neck ever since she was a baby. It was put there by her old nurse whom she devotedly loved and I had never seen it off her neck before.

"This is one of the sweetest possessions I have," she said, "it is old, you know, and I wil lend it to you. You can wear it under your gown pinned to your corset, otherwise it would show about your neck."

She hestitated a moment and then said, "I want you to wear these for something new." With that she showed me the most beautiful imitation string of pearls I have ever seen.

I gave a scream of delight.

"Where did you find them, where did you find them? Of course, I'll wear them. No one excepting an expert would know they were not real. Where did you get them?"

She told me that she had run across a man who had purchased them for someone of whom he was very fond and, having lost her he desired to part with them. She said that she found out all about how to obtain them through Betty Stokley, who is abroad, so I imagine that she got the imitation string of pearls from some foreigner who arrived in this country hard up.

"They are perfectly lovely, dear," I said, "and I can't imagine a string of real ones being more beautiful."

The something blue is, of course, a garter with a gorgeous gold clasp. Alice must have spent her entire allowance for some time to come for these gifts. Wasn't it sweet of her? I rather envy the man that she will marry. She would be so loving, so ideally trustful, so altogether satisfying.

So you will be here day after tomorrow. Until then, I am your impatient and most disconsolate,

LESLIE.

❖ ❖ Berton Braley's Daily Poem ❖ ❖
❖ THE ESSENTIAL ❖
❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ By Berton Braley ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Oh if you write a story, a story brave and fine
With thrill in every chapter and art in every line,
Still all its glow and glamor will be but fugitive
Unless you put some love in—for Love's what makes it live.

And if you sing a carol with lovely words and tune
That ripple like the waters beneath a silver moon,
Its magic will not tarry or linger very long
Unless you put some love in for Love's what makes the song!

What if your deeds be splendid, what if your fame be wide?
These are but transitory and will not long abide;
However you be lauded, however fortune smile,
If love itself be lacking—they are not worth the while.

So if with pen you labor, or brush or spade or maul,
And if you fashion statues, or towers proud and tall,
Whatever be the talent of artistry that's yours,
Be sure to put some love in—for Love alone endures.

YOUNG AND OLD

When all the world is young, lad,
And all the trees are green,
And every goose a swan, lad,
And every lass a queen;
Then they forgot and horse, lad,
And round the world away!
Young blood must have its course, lad,
And every dog his day.

When all the world is old; lad,
And all the trees are rown;
And all the sport is stale, lad
And all the wheels run down;
Creep home and take your place there,
The spent and maimed among:
God grant you find one fact there
You loved when you were young.

NATIONAL CAMPAIGN TO IMPROVE HEALTH OF AMERICAN GIRLS

To Be Inaugurated at Conference in Washington This Week Called By Mrs Herbert Hoover, Head of Girl Scouts

WOULD INCREASE VIGOR, MENTAL, MORAL QUALITIES GIRLS

By Harry B. Hunt

WASHINGTON, April 4—A nation-wide movement to promote the health fitness and morale of every woman and girl in America will be inaugurated at a conference of hygene and physical education authorities to be held in Washington April 6 and 7.

The conference is called under the auspices of the National Amateur Athletic Federation, by Mrs Herbert Hoover, the only woman vice president of the federation and national president of the Girl Scouts.

The major aim of the sessions will be to make up, for women and girls, a comprehensive program of athletics and recreation activities. Such a program for men and boys, formulated at a previous conference, is now in operation.

Conference Program

"The conference will afford an opportunity for the discussion of the three following major topics," says Mrs. Hoover.

"First, standards and tests and their co-ordination.

"Second, mass activities and their effect on the individual and the community.

"Third, competetive athletics.

MRS HERBERT HOOVER

"These questions will be discussed at the conference by recognized leaders in the various related fields of hygiene, physical education and physical recreation."

With a comprehensive program of athletics and recreational activities, through which the work of all institutions and organizations dealing with hygiene and physical education can be co-ordinated, it is believed that the entire movement can be placed on a nation-wide footing that will enable it to function smoothly and effectively.

Such a result would work definitely to improve the fitness of the individuals and the race. Among the benefits which might properly be expected to follow are:

Increased vigor, vitality and endurance.

The improvement of mental and moral qualities, such as courage, presence of mind, sportsmanship, loyalty, team play, cooperation and certain fundamentals of leadership, fellowship and followship

All of these will combine to increase the usefulness of American women to the nation.

Controlling any program for women, however, are physiological, anatomical and emotional factors which, obviously nessitate a different range of activities from those included in thep rogram worked out for men.

Experts At Meeting

Leading national health organizations and social agencies will be represented at the conference and will assist in working out the problem. Hygiene and physical education experts from universities and colleges, normal schools, public schools and other educational institutions will be supplemented by representatives from such organizations as the National Health Council, the National Child Welfare Association, the Girl Scouts the Young Women's Christian Association and the Playground and Health Association.

FRESH VEGETABLE PRICES LOWER

Green Products Now Plentiful on Market, Finding Way to Many Local Tables

With larger quntities of fresh vegetables coming from the south prices are becoming lower on the local markets. Head lettuce, cabbage, radishes, greens, tomatoes and others are becoming so plentiful that they are no longer deemed luxuries but actual necessities for the daily bill of fare.

Though no fresh vegetables which can form the bulk of the average meal have yet appeared on the market, the public appetite is demanding increasing quantities of these extra delicacies.

Grocers report that the sale of canned goods is unusually large at this time of year, due to the fact that home canned products are beginning to run low in the average household larder. From now until home grown produce makes its appearance on the market, housewives will have to depend mainly on the shipped products and canned goods.

Reports from farmers of the surrounding territory indicate that the peaches have been killed by the recent freezing temperature. The crop will not be an entire loss, it is though, but considerable damage has been done. Apples and other fruits apparently have not been hurt and a good crop of them is expected.

"TAKE IT FROM ME" TONIGHT FULL OF FUN AND BEAUTY

One of the features of "Take It From Me" Jos M. Gaites' fascinating musical comedy, which will be presented at the Manring tonight is the striking originality and beauty of the costumes of the big chorus of pretty girls and the amazing "class" and distinction of the gowns and hats worn by the principals

The secret of the superiority in colour, fabric, draping and general 'style" of the dresses and millinery, the linger rie and shoes worn in "Take It From Me" is explained by the fact that Will B. Johnstone, who wrote the libretto and also designed the costumes, the scenic effects and the modern gowns worn by the principals, is himself an artist of high achievements as an illustrator, cartoonist, and water-colorist.

The excruciatingly funny incidents in the plot of "Take It From Me" are all taken from real life in a great city department store. Unlike most of the musical comedies or so-called "play with music," this extraordinary offering contains a group of comedy characters so well defined, so perfectly identified with their environments and with the musical and comedy requirements of the piece, that "Take It From Me" is by way of immortalizing a number of types easily recognized by every one who patronizes the "big stores."

ITALIAN PRINCESS FIRST SAVOY TO WED COMMONER

Beautiful Yolanda, Daughter of Italy's Rulers Will Marry for Love—Mussolini to Perform Ceremony Saturday

ASKS WEDDING GIFT MONEY GO FOR CHARITY

By Milton Bronner

ROME, April 5—When the beautiful Princess Yolanda, eldest daughter of the king and queen of Italy, weds Count Calvi di Bergolo, Saturday, she will erect a landmark in the history of the House of Savoy, one of the oldest reigning families in Europe.

For the first time a daughter of the Savoys will marry outside of royalty.

Princess Mary of England recently set her the example, ut girls of the British royal family previously had wedded commoners.

Princess Mary married a man belonging to a house ennobled for centuries. Princess Yolanda is marrying a man whose house has been ennobled only for a bare century.

The title of Mary's husband was gilded by a fortune estimated at $15,000,000. Yolanda's bridegroom has only modest estates.

But all Italy is rejoicing because the husband-to-be is of Yolanda's own race and religion and was wounded in defending Italian soil against the Austrian invaders.

Marriage For Love

This is a marriage for love, not for reasons of state; hence it will be celebrated with great simplicity. No invitations have been forwarded to foreign courts.

The wedding is to be a family affair, performed at the Quirinal palace in Rome, where the royal family resides.

Prime Minister Mussolini, in his capacity as Notary of the Crown will conduct the civil ceremony, after which Yolanda will surrender her title of princess and her right to be called "Royal Highness."

The fact that the leader of the Fascisti will conduct the ceremonies will please the bride because she happens to be a great admirer of the Fascisti movement and of its magnetic leader.

When Mussolini, at the head of the Fascisti, marched into Rome and took over the governmental reigns, Princess Yolanda stood on a palace balcony and cheered him with enthusiasm.

After Mussolini has performed his part in the wedding, he will be decorated by the king with the "Collar of the Annunziata" and thus will become a "cousin of the king."

Religious Ceremony

The religious wedding will take place in the Pauline Chapel. The union will be blessed by one of the cardinals. It will be the first time since 1870 that the Pauline Chapel has been opened for a religious function

The wedding breakfast will be largely a family affair, although Mussolini and some other prominent Italian statesmen and noblemen will be present.

After a short honeymoon, plans for which are being kept secret, the young couple will settle in a small villa on the outskirts of Pinerolo, where Count Calvi's regiment is stationed.

Economy In Trousseau

In keeping with the economizing spirit of the Fascistized Italy, the princess asked that no wedding gifts be bestowed upon her. Instead she asked that the money intended for such purposes be given to various charities.

However, she will get one present. The officers of the bridegroom's regiment will follow the regimental tradition when a brother officer weds and give her a solid silver tray, engraved will the arms and motto of the regiment and scenes from battles in which itd istinguished itself.

It is far from a regal trousseau that is being prepared for the future Duchess di Montemagno—from the title which will be bestowed upon Calvi by the king, the dukedom being named after one of the bridegroom's estates.

The most of the dresses of the bride will be either in beige or deep cream, her favorite colors. which strikingly set off her dark hair and eyes.

WHAT'S GOING ON IN THE WORLD

By Charles P. Stewart

That France will fail to overcome German resistance to her Ruhr part is a thing the Paris government isn't afraid of a bit, according to Gallic spokesmen.

It's acknowledged that the French aren't getting as much coal as before they entered the Ruhr. It isn't disputed that the invasion has been expensive. It's conceded that the government has had to overcome considerable opposition at home.

All that doesn't bother them, the French leaders say. They declare Germany has suffered much more acutely than France that even now she's on the verge of yielding. When she does so, the French expect to get back all they put into the enterprise, and more too.

That is to say, that's what they expect, provided they're left to effect their own settlement with the Germans. What they fear is that somebody will try to "butt in."

At any rate, so the Paris press says.

Outside Help Isn't Wanted

The view expressed by the French newspapers is that their country bore the brunt of the war, won it, and then other countries that took part in the peace negotiations euchred her out of a lot of advantages she'd have claimed if she'd made her own terms with Germany.

The press is fearful now. France having shouldered all the expense and trouble and taken all the risks of the Ruhr occupation, that outsiders will try again to prevent her from getting the full benefit of that, too.

This ,some of the papers say quite frankly, is why the French are so suspicious of meditation. They have an idea the meditators will think more about their own interests than they will about Frances.

They mention this as the main reason why a settlement's delayed.

Burma's Wealth Of Oil

Just as he was leaving the cabinet ex-secretary of the interior Fall charged that a conspiracy, including interests in every important country but this one, exists to gobble up the whole supply of the world's oil, exhaust America's, and then lay the United States under tribute for every gallon she has to have in the future

Now, only a few days later, comes England's announcement that her government was mistaken awhile ago when it declared everybody but Britons barred from looking for oil in Burma, which is suposed to be very rich in such deposits.

It seems England laid claim to a Burma monopoly under an arrangement said to have been made by Queen Victoria and Lord Salisbury, in the days when he was her prime minister. But the latest statement is to the effect that the queen's and his lordship's signatures to the papers this claim was based on, are found to be bogue. So if Americans want to hunt oil in Burma, they're welcome to it, so far as England's concerned.

In some quarters there's a disposition to question whether this discovery ever would have been made but for Secretary Fall's accusation.

Fresh Turkish Angle

There are prospects of another oil controversy in Asiatic Turkey.

In 1908 an American syndicate, headed by Colby M. Chester, a retired rear admiral, got a concession from the then sultan coveting what's supposed to be a very rich old district around Lake Van.

Before this syndicate got to work the war was started. Nothing could be done while it lasted. Then the old Imperial Turkish government was overthrown. The new regime repudiated a good many of the old one's acts, but the news comes now that the Angora council of ministers has deceded the Chester concession is all right. The Turkish parliament seems likely to concur.

The British thought they had an oil monopoly in Asiatic Turkey and they're almost certain to be dis appointed if they learn they haven't. In this dispute with the British it's a good guess that Americans will take the Turkish side.

No American League

North Americans at the Pan American conference at Santiago, Chile, made a good start by opposing Uruguay's proposed league of American nations

There wasn't a chance of the scheme's indorsement by the more important South American countries and before any of them except Chile had had time to say so, Chairman Fletcher of the North American group declared his country was unfavorable to leagues, thus forestalling, at least on one ground, the frequently made South American complaint that the United States seeks to dominate the New World.

Pan American arms limitation looks difficult.

Chile wants reduction, Argentina the status quo, Brazil army and navy increases. There are three big Latin American countries— the A. B .C. group. If they can't agree, the rest can't.

The United States having loaned experts to build up Brazil's navy, isn't in a position to urge limitation.

U. S. Toasted Brown

For perhaps the most pungent chiticism ever published of this country's methods in South America, the medal goes to vice president H. C. Zwetsch of the bond house of A. B. Leach and Co., who, just back from a tour of Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Uruguay, Paraguay, Bolivia, Peru and Ecuador, gave out an interview in which, among other things, he said:

"To South America the Yankee peril looms far more deadly than the Japanese ever did to California.

"South America never has had confidence in us, nor reason to have.

"We've tried to make South Americans into our pattern, not adapted ours to suit them.

"When our Federal Reserve bank rate was 6 per cent, England was loaning to South American merchants at 2½.

"Instead of fostering South American militarism (a reference to the loan of United States naval experts to Brazil) it would pay us to help finance and industry.

"North American chambers of commerce in South America are mismanaged and inefficient.

"The English and Italians send their best men to South America; we haven't sent that kind.

"There are exceptions: firms which haven't gold, men and handled their business with sense have profited."

HOME INFLUENCE VS. AUTOMOBILE

Parents' Indifference Causes Children to Drift—Urges Return Old Living Room Table

MUSKOGEE, Okla., April 6—Bring back the old-fashioned living room table.

Bring back the front porch swing, and, if you want real, romantic joy again, take out the one-horse shay.

Thus will home return to its former glory, asserts Mrs V. Janet Heckman, teacher and mother of Helen Heckman, "Oklahoma's Wonder Girl." And, to assure the development of character and fineness of youth. she adds, beware of falling victim to the automobile.

Mrs. Heckman has written article and books on children and their development, and from her studies his concluded this age of automobiles and petting parties has been ruinous to our youth.

Auto To Blame

"The automobile, one of the greatest and most useful of our modern inventions, yet highly destructive to our youth, has robbed the home of its former charm and interest for the child and, in many instances, for the parents as well," she says.

"It has led them into places of amusement unthought or unheard of before and diveded the interests of the family.

"The passing of the living-room table in so many of our modern homes is the reason for so many delinquencies in the boy and girl of today With its passing the fineness of our youth has suffered, their character undeveloped.

"No longer have we the home-like picture of the father on one side of the table, the mother on the other, with their sons and daughters grouped about reading from constructive books of an evening, discussing, exchanging and weighing thoughts and passing judgment upon their values.

Generalship Needed

"With parents no longer like generals, drilling and training their young recruits, the home is losing its foundation for strength and fails in the purpose for which it was intended.

"After all, the modern oy and girl are really a reflection of the home. For is this not an age of parental irresponsibility? Has not the parents' indifference, as a rule, caused the children to drift from their influence into the modern maelstrom of pleasure?

"With the re-establishment of the substantial reading table in the home, with broadening literature for the child upon it, the parent and the child growing in constructive thought together, and with the introduction of the study and practice of music, we will hear liss of jeuvenile delinquencies."

GLASGOW SCOTLAND TO BE SLUMLESS

British City Particularly Famous For Wonderful Record In Municipal Government

Glasgow, Scotland, whose officials have announced that they will wipe out one of the last slum districts and provide instead municipal owned homes in the surburbs, thus bids fair soon to become one of the few slumless great cities.

"Glasgow's fame has gone farthest, perhaps, because of the wonderful record of its city government and the somewhat unusual municipal enterprises which it has conducted for its inhabitants. It's numerous municipally owned and operated services might well have drawn the charge of Bolshevism had they not proved successful business ventures long before that term was invented. The city took over its waterworks at an early date and developed them. It has operated its own gas works since 1869 and even rents cooking stoves to householders for a small fee. Since 1892 the city has not only lighted its streets from municipally operated generating stations, but has also furnished current for industry and for lighting dwellings. The street railways have been owned since 1872 and operated since 1894 by the city. The municipality constructed a subway when only London and Budapest had them and operated it successfully by cable when London's steam "tube" was a failure.

There are a score or more of city-owne bathhouses and washhouses where family washing may be done with modern facilities; and since 1870 the city has conducted municipal lodging houses. There is also a municipal "family home" where children are assured good care while their parents are at work. In the provision of public markets, libraries, parks and playgrounds, the city was a pioneer. A number of bands are kept busy providing music in the parks during the summer, while at other seasons municipal concerts with excellent programs are onducted in the city's eight halls with tickets for only a few cents. The city began cleaning away its slums in 1866.
